WHY BHILWARA ? (STRATEGIC IMPORTANCE)

Getting the right target audience is key to today's marketing efforts. Reaching your potential customer, at his comfort, his convenience is essential. As you search for textile machinery and yarn buyers, there can be no bigger concentrated cluster than Bhilwara. Turnover of Rs 20,000 Crore Rs. Manufacture and sale of over 300 Crore Meters of fabric. Over 16,000 weaving machines. 26 process houses, 19 spinning mills, 20 garment units, 30 TFO units and a skilled direct manpower compliment of over 60,000 persons. Consumption of 50,000 tons of Yarn And Raw material. Natural as well as manmade. Supportive to this a huge service sector and ancillary industry. Poised for modernisation, growth, product change. This is just Bhilwara, not to forget the nearby regions of Pali, Balotra, Banswara, Kishangarh, Jaipur, Udaipur and north India.

An expected conservative 10 % growth means demand for 1000 Plus modern weaving machines, a realistic 10% up gradation replacement means 1600 shuttle less looms more. Shift to cotton means a potential demand of above 20 Sizing machines. Supporting process house equipments required means potential for yarn dyeing and cotton processing facilities. Desire and natural business movement to value added products means new Garment units. Modernisation and need to better use Human resources creates demand for services in software, automation. Increasing energy and environmental regulations gives an opportunity for water treatment and energy saving companies. The huge supply demand gap for Technical Textiles offers a ready industrial base and entrepreneur keen to venture into such projects.

This quantum growth in manufacturing base requires huge amount of Raw material be it fibre or yarn. In this edition we bring the suppliers to the doorstep of the consumer both existing and those potential. Getting them aware of your presence and products is the magic key to seizing a chunk of this market. Such a massive and potential area within a few square kilometres. A ripe platform for intensive marketing efforts forecasting maximum return on time and money invested. Now made even more cost effective and cost efficient by drawing the potential client to you. At your presence in TEMTECH.
